

National Technician Development Centre for HE

CREATING A SUSTAINABLE FUTURE
FOR TECHNICAL STAFF AND SERVICES

What is the National Technician Development Centre?

The National Technician Development Centre is a one-stop shop, providing organisations with access to information, expertise and a range of research and tools (including the nationally recognised TDM Toolkit) specifically designed to support the delivery of high-quality technical services across all areas, including Arts, Science, Engineering and Medicine.

Who is the National Technician Development Centre team?

The NTDC team has decades of both management and technical experience between them, giving the NTDC a unique understanding of the role of the technician and the problems facing technical services moving forward. The team consists of experts from HEFCE's Technical Development and Modernisation project, specialists from various universities including the University of Sheffield, Manchester Metropolitan University and Newcastle University, as well as other experienced independent advisors.

Who does the National Technician Development Centre support?

The NTDC is available to universities, research institutions and related bodies across the UK to help create a sustainable future for their technical staff and services.

How can the National Technician Development Centre help my organisation?

The NTDC can help your organisation in a variety of ways, including, but not limited to:

- Advising on reviews and restructuring of technical communities and technical services
- Guidance on talent recruitment and retention
- Activities to increase Professional Registration
- Helping to develop technical networks
- Delivering presentations and bespoke workshops
- Supporting your institution's Technician Commitment

Should I become an NTDC Partner Affiliate?

By joining our ever-increasing portfolio of Partner Affiliates you will receive a discount on the NTDC Tailored Support Package, a complimentary initial meeting and follow up, exclusive NTDC updates, input on the development of future resources, as well as a welcome pack including a Certificate of Partnership and other marketing materials.
